

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

Hello, my name is David and I live in Lexington, Ky. I find it hard to believe that you are considering dropping the requirement that the telephone companies be required to provide ISPs access to (their networks). Have you ever heard of the concept of a monopoly? This is exactly the reason why my cable bill is outrageous; I only have the choice of one provider. I have been subscribing to an independant dsl provider for about a year and a half and have been very satisfied with the service I receive. If I can no longer get the service from them, I will have to go back to a dialup internet connection or be forced to choose between my local phone company's service or going to cable net access (supporting yet another monopoly). PLEASE do not do this to us, the consumer. Thank you for listening.

Sincerely,

David Dix
